Wednesday On Capitol Hill, Washington got a playful and an eyeful at PETA's annual National Veggie Dog Day. Playboy Playmates Jayde Nicole and Jo Garcia showed up to represent the cause in lettuce Bikinis. The best moments of the video below include the pruril Applebee's ad showing LOTS of meat-a-licious food (the irony!), when one of the playmates moves her hair out of the way so the camera can get a better shot of her breasts, and when a Washington suit attempts to hit on one of the ladies.

Also: In the 9th photo of the slideshow, look closely at the tattoo one of the ladies has in the bikini region. (HT to a HuffPost Editor who wishes to remain anonymous.)

Once again, PETA shows why their slogan should be: "Eat Py, Not Meat".

Congratulations to PETA on getting the eradication rate of adoptable animals in your Norfolk Virginia shelter up above 95%!

It is an interesting theory to kill all the animals so that we ensure they aren't treated in an inhumane fashion.

Peta as usual is using inappropriate imagery. Any point of animal rights is lost or marginalized by what can only be described as a joke.

Is PETA doing anyone a favour by promoting an unrealistic body image to young women?

Are they doing anything at all to teach teenagers that fries and a diet coke are not a suitable vegan diet?

I suppose all those little interns are the people who send us form letters when we complain about Congress' lack of actions. I wonder which ones are Senator Burr's?
